

John Green Returns to Fiction After Nine Years with HOLLYWOOD, ENDING (9/22/26)

Hi [Name],

For the first time in nine years, John Green is returning to fiction. This fall, the #1 internationally bestselling author of THE FAULT IN OUR STARS, LOOKING FOR ALASKA, and TURTLES ALL THE WAY DOWN is back with an entirely new first: his debut adult novel.

On September 22, Dutton Books will publish HOLLYWOOD, ENDING (Hardcover; $29.00), a behind-the-scenes Hollywood love story about fame, trust, and the increasingly fragile line between a public and private life. Ahead of the release, we would love to bring John to Good Morning America to discuss the novel and the story that brought him back to fiction nearly a decade after his last.

The novel follows rising actors Kai and Juniper, who land the roles that could change their careers in the buzzy Andy Warhol biopic, Andy Warhol Never Gets Old. As the film begins to take off, the attention that once represented everything they wanted begins to transform their lives and their relationship. Told through both of their perspectives, HOLLYWOOD, ENDING juxtaposes their experience of modern celebrity with Warhol's life at the dawn of celebrity culture, asking what it means to fall in love when suddenly everyone is watching.

With more than 60 million books in print worldwide, John's work has reached readers across generations. His books have been translated into more than 55 languages and adapted for film and television.

For Good Morning America, the novel offers a timely jumping-off point for a broader conversation about how our relationship with fame has evolved from Warhol's celebrity culture to the social media era. John can speak to what drew him to Hollywood as a setting, the parallels he sees between those two worlds, and why he wanted to explore them through a love story.

John will be in New York surrounding the publication and is available for interviews. We would be happy to coordinate an in-studio appearance and send along an advance copy (print or digital) of HOLLYWOOD ENDING for your consideration.

I look forward to hearing your thoughts!

Best,
Ava Sofia
